Finding the Right Treatment for Adolescents

Below are some questions to consider when selecting a service or treatment program:

How are services paid for? Some, but not all, services are covered by insurance. If your insurance does not cover the services offered by a program funded by the Department of Public Health (MDPH), many programs will:

- make an assessment whether an individual or family can help pay for any portion of the services
- work on a payment plan or a sliding scale fee if appropriate
- try to access other forms of payment, like state funding that covers substance use treatment services

Is the program licensed and does it have licensed staff trained in addiction treatment? All substance use treatment programs in the Commonwealth are required by regulation to be licensed by the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services (BSAS). Many treatment providers employ staff that have specific substance use-related credentials, like Certified Alcohol and Drug Counselors (CADAC) and Licensed Alcohol and Drug Counselors (LADC), or have other masters level clinicians, like social workers and mental health counselors, as staff members.

Does the program offer a full range of services that support the recovery process? A program should be able to offer or connect individuals and families to a variety of services supporting recovery, from substance use and mental health problems to addressing other areas of life like housing, physical health, employment, and education.

Are services offered to support family members?

Many programs offer family education and support services. At a minimum, all programs should be able to refer families to resources and support groups in the community that offer help. Since youth and young adults with families involved in their treatment tend to have better outcomes, programs should involve families and caregivers as much as possible.

Is aftercare support and referral encouraged and provided? Programs should be able to refer and link individuals and families to a variety of professional and recovery supports upon discharge.

Outpatient Providers Serving Adolescents

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) - Bureau of Substance Abuse Services (BSAS) supports and licenses community-based outpatient programs. These programs provide assessment and counseling services for young people with a substance use problem and their families. Below is a list of outpatient providers who work with young people under the age of 18.

Call the licensed outpatient programs listed below directly to make referrals or to find out about services.

Youth Detoxification and Stabilization Programs

The two youth stabilization programs in Massachusetts were developed to meet the growing need for a full, effective, and responsive system of substance use treatment services for adolescents. These programs provide youth in crisis with a safe, short-term treatment environment. Youth receive the assessment, treatment, supervision, and medical monitoring necessary to help with detoxification and emotional stabilization.

Once stabilized, youth receive a full psychosocial assessment about their current needs. With this information, staff can develop appropriate treatment and aftercare plans. Thorough assessments allow staff at these programs to make referrals to appropriate services, supports, and resources for youth and their families.

The youth detoxification and stabilization services are for male, female, and transgender-identified individuals between the ages of 13 and 17. An average duration is 14 days, but an individual's length of stay may depend on:

- clinical needs identified during the assessment
- progress toward treatment goals
- development of an appropriate aftercare plan
- number of days covered by insurance

Call the stabilization programs listed below to make a referral or for more information about their services.

Youth Residential Treatment Programs

In general, residential substance use treatment is appropriate for youth who:

- are not currently at risk for medically complicated withdrawal from alcohol or other drug use
- are experiencing health, emotional, family, and/or social problems due to their alcohol or other drug use
- have not been able to address their substance use problems in less intense levels of care like outpatient counseling or support groups (prior substance use treatment is not a requirement)
- are 13 to 17 years old

All programs serve transgender-identified youth. The length of stay varies based on treatment needs and can be up to 90 days.

All youth at residential treatment programs can expect:

- qualified, credentialed staff to work with youth and their family/caregivers to create an individual treatment plan
- developmentally-appropriate individual, group, and family counseling services
- an educational coordinator to develop educational objectives with the youth's school
- a highly structured, alcohol- and drug-free environment
- a discharge plan that includes identifying and linking youth and their families to services and resources in the community to support ongoing recovery after treatment (examples include outpatient counseling, case management, and community-based support groups)

There are various means of paying for residential services. Currently, insurance plans do not cover residential treatment services. The youth residential programs are all licensed and regulated by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) - Bureau of Substance Abuse Services (BSAS). Programs are funded by MDPH - BSAS and by families/caregivers having the financial means to pay for all, or some, of the treatment costs. If a family or individual cannot pay for services, this will not be a barrier to admission and participation in the treatment program.

Transitional Age Youth and Young Adult (TAYYA) Residential Programs

The young adult residential programs provide a nurturing, structured, and safe environment for young people. These programs promote self-care, self-reliance, and community responsibility through structured activities and the experience of living in an alcohol- and drug-free residential treatment setting. An average length of stay is four to six months depending on treatment-and recovery-related goals. Services include assessment, comprehensive substance use treatment, mental health counseling referrals, case management and coordination, psycho-education on a variety of topics relating to health and wellbeing, life skills enhancement, vocational/educational support, recovery support, parent/caregiver support, and aftercare planning.

Call the Transitional Age Youth and Young Adult (TAYYA) residential programs directly to make a referral or for more information about their services.

Recovery High Schools

Recovery high schools are four-year high schools for youth who are experiencing a problem with substance use. Recovery high schools were created to provide educational environments suited to support youth recovering from substance use disorders.

The five recovery high schools are located in Beverly, Boston, Brockton, Springfield, and Worcester. Residents outside these districts can attend. Each school has the capacity to serve 30-50 students and each uses a similar model while still reflecting the culture and needs of their local communities.

The schools provide a comprehensive academic curriculum consistent with Massachusetts State Standards, MCAS testing protocols, and course requirements of the student's school district. All of the schools can serve students who have Individualized Education Plans (IEP).

The schools actively support students in their recovery by providing smaller class sizes, individualized attention, licensed counseling services, and daily group meetings where students are able to discuss and process issues related to their education and recovery. The schools strongly encourage and provide opportunities for caregiver involvement and are jointly funded by the Department of Public Health (MDPH) – Bureau of Substance Abuse Services (BSAS), local school districts, and educational collaboratives/consortiums.

Call the recovery high schools listed below to make a referral or for more information about their services.

Family Intervention Programs

Family Intervention programs use evidence-based practices to engage adolescents, young adults, and family members. Services provide clinical intervention and support focused on engaging the individual with an active substance use problem into treatment and/or recovery services. These programs also provide ongoing support, skill building, and resource development for caregivers and family members.

There are currently two models being supported by the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services (BSAS): the Adolescent Community Reinforcement Approach and Assertive Continuing Care (A-CRA/ACC); and the ARISE model.

A-CRA/ACC

A-CRA/ACC works with the youth/young adults to support their strengths, foster community support, and build coping skills. Clinicians offer case management, which can include transportation and support for job and education-related searches. Culturally competent clinicians provide home-based services for the young person and their family member/caregiver. These services typically run for three to six months and are available in some areas in Spanish and Portuguese.

Intervention Programs for Youth

MassSTART School- Based Intervention Programs

MassSTART is a school-centered intervention program, which has proven positive outcomes for youth, their families, and the community. MassSTART serves youth 8 to 13 years old at high risk for or experiencing criminal justice involvement, substance use, family violence, and school, social, and/or behavioral problems. Case workers use a positive youth development framework to coordinate and provide support and services at school and in the home. MDPH-BSAS supports the MassSTART intervention model with programs currently running in South Boston, Dorchester, and Winthrop.

Call the school-based MassSTART programs listed below for more information about their services.

Bridge Over Troubled Waters

Bridge Over Troubled Waters (BOTW) has two housing support programs for homeless young adults who have a history of substance abuse. One program offers transitional housing services for 16- to 21- year-old homeless young women who are pregnant or have a young child. The other program offers transitional housing support to single young adults and serves men and women. The transitional living program emphasizes responsibility, personal growth, and communication. Residents learn life skills and get help finding permanent housing, getting a job, and/or filling out school applications.

For young families involved with BOTW additional emphasis is placed on parenting skills and child development.

SAFE

SAFE is a capacity-building initiative to increase treatment admissions across Massachusetts for underserved adolescent populations with substance use disorders. This BSAS-funded project is managed by the Institute for Health and Recovery (IHR). SAFE offers:

- consultation to adolescent providers
- workshops to educate parents and community providers about available substance use treatment resources for adolescents
- co-facilitation of psycho-educational drug and alcohol groups for adolescents using a train-the-trainer model

- co-facilitation of parent support groups using a train-the-trainer model and the curriculum “Parent Time: Supporting Yourself & Your Child” for parents with adolescents who are using alcohol and other drugs
- peer leader trainings on adolescent substance use issues;
- evidence-based treatment and case management services for youth with substance use issues who may not access traditional forms of treatment

Marijuana Education for Youth Statewide Ballot Initiative — Question 2

On November 4, 2008, Massachusetts voters passed Ballot Question 2, “An Act Establishing a Sensible State Marijuana Policy.” Under this law youth under age 18 who receive a citation for possession of under one ounce of marijuana must complete a Drug Awareness Program.

This includes at least four hours of a drug awareness class, ten hours of community service, and payment of a $100 fine. Classroom sessions are scheduled throughout the state based on demand.

The Question 2 Project Specialist provides statewide coordination of the Drug Awareness Program through the Institute for Health and Recovery (IHR).

Allies in Recovery (AIR) is an MDPH-supported online resource which provides families with a way to change the conversation about addiction. AIR uses Community Reinforcement and Family Training (CRAFT), a proven approach that helps the family unblock and advance the relationship towards sobriety and recovery, and engage a loved one into treatment. AIR offers free unlimited membership for Massachusetts residents who use their zip code as the promotional code. Visit www.alliesinrecovery.net

Learn To Cope (LTC) is an MDPH-funded parent/family support program developed by a mother whose son was struggling with opioid addiction. LTC is a place where parents can get support from other parents who have had similar experiences with a child who may be using drugs or alcohol. LTC meetings are held in many Massachusetts communities and parents can learn to recognize signs of an overdose and be trained on how to prevent a fatal overdose, including use of Narcan (naloxone); a medication used to safely reverse a potentially fatal opioid overdose.
